

Farm Friends

words and photos by Susan B. Katz

Rooster wakes everyone with the rising sun.

“What’s new?” asks the ewe.

“Baa,” says the sheep.
“Let us sleep!”

“My little lamb’s up now
She’ll wake the cow!”

Cow says, "It's too late,
Come open the gate."

“What’s all the noise?
You’ll wake my boys.”

“It’s okay! We want to run all day!”

“It will rain, of course,” said the horse.

“Come stay warm before the storm!”

“I am watching the clock,”
yelled the peacock.

“Won’t rain very much,
just a light touch.”

“You want to bet
my wool will get wet?”

“I’m going back to bed.
Wake me up when we’re fed.”
